Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Cecelia, thirteen, lives with her father in a working-class suburb of Detroit. Her life is a quiet cycle of solitary domestic rituals and lonely social occasions. This routine is enlivened only by her fascination with Lolly, a television talk-show she believes allows her glimpses into the larger world beyond her own. After another girl in her neighborhood mysteriously vanishes, the texture of Cecelia's daily life is altered as she joins tentatively with the community's halting efforts to deal with the loss. When a letter from Cecelia about the lost girl prompts Lolly's show to come to town, Cecelia must confront her own role in the conversion of her schoolmate's disappearance into a media event. About the Author James Morrison is the author of a memoir, Broken Fever (St. Martin's Press, 2001), as well as several books on film. His fiction and nonfiction have appeared in Massachusetts Review, Michigan Quarterly Review, Ploughshares, Raritan, and many other magazines. He lives in Southern California, where he teaches film, literature, and creative writing at Claremont McKenna College. James Morrison observes each subtle tilt toward maturity so deftly that by the last chapter we're convinced...
